

Peripheral Nerve Stimulation of Genicular Nerves Versus Conventional Therapy With Intra-articular Steroid Injection for Chronic Knee Pain: A Prospective, Randomized Pilot Study

NCT06004882

---

Status	RECRUITING
Phase	Not Applicable
Sponsor	M.D. Anderson Cancer Center
Enrollment	45 participants

Key Eligibility Criteria

---

Inclusion (3)

- Patients diagnosed with chronic knee pain (baseline pain score  $\geq 4$ ), seen at Pain Management Center at MD Anderson Cancer Center; if patient has bilateral knee pain, the side with the more severe knee pain will be treated first and counted towards the primary and secondary endpoints
- Patients between ages 18-85 years old
- Patient signed informed consent

Exclusion (5)

- Patients with cognitive dysfunction or without capacity to consent
- Patient with recent history ( $< 6$  months) of drug or alcohol abuse
- Patients with open skin lesion or undergoing antibiotic therapy for local or systemic infection
- Patients with allergies to local anesthesia, steroids, or adhesives
- Patients who are on opioids for reasons other than knee pain

Locations (1 total)

---

M D Anderson Cancer Center, Houston, Texas, United States